Schools are now introducing tablet computers in the classroom to help students in many ways. Some schools let students use them during classes. Students can not only study by themselves but also take exams on the tablet computers. Some tablet computers record data about students' test scores. Teachers at school check this data, and by doing so, they can evaluate their students' results and progress. Tablet computers are likely to become more common in the classroom.

Your story should begin with this sentence:

One day, Mr. and Mrs. Yamamoto were talking in their house.
